Basis Art. 9 Additional Rules Bonds, Art. 10 Additional Rules Derivatives and Art. 4 Additional Rules Exchange Traded Products

I General provision

Art. 1 Object

¹ This Directive governs the requirements that must be fulfilled by the undertaking given by a guarantor in accordance with Art. 9 Additional Rules Bonds, Art. 10 Additional Rules Derivatives, or Art. 4 Additional Rules Exchange Traded Products in order for an exemption from the requirements for issuers set out in Art. 11 LR, Art. 5 Additional Rules Bonds, Art. 5 Additional Rules Derivatives or Art. 4 Additional Rules Exchange Traded Products to be granted.

² This Directive also applies to guarantee commitments that are not required for fulfilment of the listing conditions but have nevertheless been provided out of economic considerations.

II Listing requirements

Art. 2 Definition

¹ Deemed to be guarantee commitments within the context of Art. 9 Additional Rules Bonds, Art. 10 Additional Rules Derivatives and Art. 4 Additional Rules Exchange Traded Products are guarantees pursuant to Art. 111 CO, or joint and several guarantees pursuant to Art. 496 CO. Under certain circumstances, guarantee commitments construed in accordance with foreign law are also permissible. These requirements are set out in Art. 5, 6 and 9 .

² Sufficient to satisfy the requirements of Art. 9 Additional Rules Bonds, Art. 10 Additional Rules Derivatives and Art. 4 Additional Rules Exchange Traded Products is also a "keep-well agreement" (KWA), in which a company (guarantor) commits itself legally towards the issuer consolidated in the same group to provide financial assistance in order to meet the claims of a creditor at any time on the occasion of raising or borrowing external funds. This demands, however, that the guarantor itself fulfils the requirements for listing. Further requirements for KWAs are set out in Art. 10.

Art. 3 Scope of the guarantee commitment

In principle, the guarantor must guarantee all of the issuer's commitments towards the investors.

Art. 4 Guarantee commitment with floating-rate bonds

¹ In the case of floating-rate bonds, calculation of the maximum amount of the guarantee commitment must be based on an interest rate according to market practice so that the issuer's liabilities towards the investors, which are in all likelihood to be expected, are covered.

² If the variable portion of the interest rate is determined by other criteria (e.g. the issuer's earnings), then the maximum amount of any guarantee commitment must also be set to reflect what in all likelihood are the issuer's anticipated liabilities towards the investors. The calculation may, for example, be based on a pro-forma calculation of both the historical development of the issuer and its future prospects.

³ If a maximum amount is stipulated in the guarantee commitment, such amount must cover no less than the entire capital amount of the given bond plus two full years of interest. If this minimum amount does not cover all the payment obligations associated with the bond, this amount must remain in force until all such obligations are fulfilled.

Art. 5 Applicable law

¹ In principle, guarantee commitments must be subject to Swiss law.

² Guarantee commitments subject to foreign law are permissible on the condition that the Regulatory Board recognises the applicable foreign legal system, among which are the laws of OECD member states.

³ Upon formal request, the Regulatory Board may recognise other foreign legal systems, provided the applicant can demonstrate that the specific legal system corresponds to international standards in terms of investor protection and transparency requirements.

Art. 6 Place of jurisdiction

¹ Investors must be able to take their case before a state court to assert their rights against the guarantor.

² In choosing the place of jurisdiction, the guarantor must ensure that, as at least one alternative, the courts in the country whose legal system is applicable to the guarantee in question are competent to hear such cases.

³ Derogation from the foregoing requirement is permissible in the case of a guarantee commitment issued by a public-sector guarantor (government guarantees, etc.) provided that both of the following conditions are fulfilled:

1. the national law of the guarantor permits only a domestic place of jurisdiction; this law does not necessarily have to be in a statute in the formal sense;
2. the guarantor waives its immunity to due process and the enforcement of law to the extent permitted by applicable law.
